Reykjavík!'s first album, the immense Glacial Landscapes, Religion, Oppression & Alcohol became an instant classic and had everyone in Iceland from the age of 5 to 105 throwing chairs at each other for recreation. The press also loved it, voting it the album of 2006 in close to every poll at the end of the year. The band has now released its anticipated follow-up on the dashing Kimi records label. Still crazy as fuck, but twice as powerful and even more experimental, THE BLOOD, has taken Reykjavík! a step beyond. THE BLOOD is tight, dark and static. From the beautiful drum n' feedback start of The Blood, through the up-beat and close-to-glad Repticon, to the relaxing but dim Campo Viejo, 2004 and ending with the uneasy but cheerful Random Acts of Sodomy, Reykjavík! turns out to be harder, faster and, quite frankly, better than on their famous first album. This powerful gem of a sophomore record will leave new fans and old in an ecstatic frenzy, while untrained listeners might have nothing but awe for Reykjavík! First reactions aside, this album will have everyone shaking their heads in the end. The band's wonderful gift for creating short, nasty and brutish songs filled with noise, shouts, chaos and war is in some mysterious and completely unexplainable way, catchy. Reykjavík! also has a reputation for legendary, completely insane concerts where anything goes: fire, blood and vomit. After wild classic concerts in 101 Reykjavík for years, the band has managed to warp this live atmosphere onto The Blood. The result is the absolute: a terrible beauty is born.
